Every morning, one pupil watered the plant. Hafiz was in charge on Mondays. After a week, a tiny green shoot appeared. The class cheered.

One Monday, Hafiz was in a hurry because he was late for school. He forgot to water the plant. By Wednesday, its leaves were drooping and brown. Hafiz felt terrible. He knew it was his fault.

He told Mrs Lim what had happened. Instead of scolding him, she smiled and said, "Thank you for being honest. Let's see if we can save it." Hafiz moved the pot to a sunny spot near the window and gave it some water.

Grandma's Birthday Surprise

Grandma's seventieth birthday was coming. Mei and her younger brother, Kai, wanted to give her a special surprise. "Let's bake her a cake!" said Kai. Mei was not sure. They had never baked a cake before, and Mother would be at work all afternoon.

In the end, they asked their neighbour, Auntie Rosa, for help. She owned a small bakery and agreed at once. On Saturday afternoon, the children went to her flat with flour, eggs, butter and sugar.

Auntie Rosa showed them how to measure everything carefully. Kai cracked the eggs, but one shell fell into the bowl. Mei patiently fished it out with a spoon. When the cake was in the oven, the whole flat smelled sweet. Forty minutes later, it came out golden brown.

Mei decorated the top with strawberries, and Kai wrote "Happy 70th, Grandma!" in pink icing. The letters were a little crooked, but Auntie Rosa said that made it even more special.

That evening, the family gathered for dinner. When the children carried in the cake, Grandma's eyes filled with tears. "You made this yourselves?" she asked. Kai nodded proudly. "With a little help from Auntie Rosa," Mei added.

Grandma said it was the best present she had ever received. She even asked for a second slice.
