Helping Uncle Tan

Wei Jie lived in a block of HDB flats in Toa Payoh. Every afternoon after school, he liked to read comics at the void deck while waiting for his mother to come home from work.

One hot afternoon, he noticed an elderly man, Uncle Tan, struggling to carry two heavy bags of groceries from the market. Just as Uncle Tan reached the lift, one of the bags tore and oranges rolled across the floor.

Wei Jie quickly put down his comic and ran over to help. Together, they picked up every orange. Wei Jie then offered to carry the bags up to Uncle Tan's flat on the fifth floor.

Uncle Tan was grateful and invited him in for a cup of barley water. Wei Jie noticed a chessboard on the table. Uncle Tan explained that he used to play chess every weekend before his wife passed away.

Wei Jie had just joined the Chess Club as his CCA, so he asked eagerly if Uncle Tan could teach him a new move. From that day on, he visited Uncle Tan every Friday after his Chess Club meeting, and his game improved so much that he later won a bronze medal at the inter-school competition.

Section H: Comprehension 2 (8 marks)

Read the passage and answer the questions.

Kumar's MRT Adventure

Kumar was excited because his mother finally agreed to let him travel alone to his Auntie Wong's house by MRT. Before he left, his mother repeated the instructions three times: take the North-South Line, change trains at the interchange station, and get off two stops later.

At first, everything went smoothly. Kumar found a seat near the window and watched the stations go by.

However, when the train reached the interchange, he was staring out of the window and did not notice the doors opening. By the time he looked up, the doors had already closed, and the train had left the station.

Kumar felt his heart beat faster. He had missed his stop! An elderly woman sitting across from him noticed his worried face. “Are you lost, young man?” she asked kindly. Kumar explained what had happened.

The woman smiled and told him not to worry. She showed him how to check the train map above the doors and helped him plan a new route back to the interchange. Kumar thanked her many times.

When he finally arrived at his aunt's station, Auntie Wong was waiting with a wide smile. “You made it on your own!” she said proudly. That evening, Kumar called his mother to tell her everything. “I was scared for a while,” he admitted, “but I learned how to read the train map properly now." His mother was proud of how calmly he had solved the problem.

42. Who helped Kumar when he looked lost on the train? (1 mark)

43a. What did the woman do to help Kumar? Give two things she did. (a) (1 mark)
