The New Member

Celeste had always loved watching the school dance CCA perform during assembly, but she was far too shy to join. In Primary 3, her best friend, Siti, finally convinced her to attend one trial session.

At the first practice, Celeste kept making mistakes with the steps and wanted to quit immediately. The senior dancers, however, patiently showed her the moves again and again without any complaint.

Over the next few weeks, Celeste practised every day after school, sometimes alone in front of her bedroom mirror. Slowly, the steps became easier, and she began to enjoy the music instead of fearing the mistakes.

By the time of the CCA's year-end showcase, Celeste was confident enough to perform in the front row. Her parents, watching from the audience, could hardly recognise the once-shy girl dancing so freely.

After the show, Siti hugged her tightly and said she was proud of how far Celeste had come. Celeste smiled and admitted that joining the CCA was the best decision she had made that year.

Uncle Hassan's Breakfast Stall

One rainy morning, Adam noticed that Madam Lily, an elderly widow, had forgotten her umbrella and was standing uncertainly at the stall, unable to walk home in the downpour.

Uncle Hassan quickly wrapped up her breakfast, then asked his nephew to mind the stall for a few minutes while he walked Madam Lily home under his own umbrella.

When he returned, a long queue of hungry customers had formed, but nobody complained. Several regulars said they admired how Uncle Hassan always looked out for his elderly customers.
